

Questions for Shevy

The two library pages that can publish. Six answers — five about how the firm actually works, one statute check.

Before you start

Every question below exists because the draft currently states something that was made up as a placeholder. The prose reads as finished, which is why it is more dangerous than a visible gap — a reader cannot tell the difference, and neither can the build.

PASSAGES SHOWN LIKE THIS ARE INVENTED. THEY ARE ON THE DRAFT PAGE NOW.

Wherever you see this box, the sentence inside is currently sitting on the page, written in your name, and nobody has confirmed it.

A blank is a better answer than a plausible one. If you do not know a figure off the top of your head, leave it blank or tick the box that cuts the sentence instead. Nothing here has to be filled in to be useful — every question has an option to publish nothing on that point, and each page reads perfectly well without its example.

Your byline goes on both pages when they publish — Florida Title Agent, Licence W766033 — so these are your statements, not the drafter's.

Page one — “The HOA says approval takes 30 days and we close in two weeks. Now what?”

content/title-problems/hoa-approval-delay-closing-florida.md

HA-01 — Association approval turnaround

ON THE PAGE NOW — QUICK FACTS, “TYPICAL TIMELINE”

Seven to twenty-one days from a genuinely complete application in most communities, against a quoted window that is usually 30 days. Where an interview or a board meeting is required, the meeting calendar sets the date rather than the review itself. The shortest turnaround we have documented is three business days.

(a) What range do you actually see, from a genuinely complete application to approval?

(b) What is your real fastest documented turnaround — and are you willing to publish it?

(c) Is the “an interview or board meeting sets the date” point true in your experience?

- ☐ Yes, as written.
- ☐ No — cut it.
- ☐ Rephrase:

HA-04 — A real example

The draft carries the passage below, presented to readers as a composite of real Bayit Title files. None of it happened.

ON THE PAGE NOW — BODY, “WHAT ACTUALLY SHORTENS IT?”

a Broward condominium quoted 30 days. The application went in on a Monday with the current form, both fees paid by cashier's cheque as that association required, the executed contract with every addendum, and the background authorisation signed by both buyers. The management company confirmed receipt as complete on the Tuesday, the interview was held that Friday, and the certificate of approval issued the following Wednesday — nine days against a quoted thirty.

One real composite, drawn from however many files you like. No client-identifying detail — county and property type only.

What the association quoted:

What went in, and how complete it was:

What actually happened, and how long it took:

- ☐ We don't have one worth publishing — cut the example. (The page still works without it.)

Page two — “The contract isn’t the standard form. What does that change at closing?”

content/title-problems/non-standard-purchase-contract-florida-closing.md

This page carries three warnings saying outright that it is not publishable. All three come out when you answer.

NS-02 — What you read first

ON THE PAGE NOW — LABELLED “PLACEHOLDER... IT MUST BE REPLACED WITH THE ORDER BAYIT TITLE ACTUALLY WORKS IN”

1. The parties and the property · 2. Price, deposit and who holds it · 3. The closing date and how deadlines count · 4. Conditions to closing · 5. Cost allocation · 6. Title and survey provisions · 7. Default and remedies · 8. Every addendum, in date order

When a bespoke contract lands on your desk, what do you actually read first? Renumber the list above, strike anything you don’t check, add what is missing.

NS-03 — One real file

The draft’s example is labelled “none of it comes from a real file and all of it must be replaced or deleted.” It needs three things from one genuine file.

(a) Which terms differed from the standard form?

(b) Did any of them change a title requirement — or only the closing statement and the schedule?

(c) What did you ask to be clarified in writing before you built the closing statement?

☐ Use no example — cut the section.

NS-01 — Time and cost

ON THE PAGE NOW — QUICK FACTS, “TYPICAL TIMELINE”

What a bespoke contract adds is reading time at the front — allow an extra day or two on opening the file, and longer where an ambiguous term has to be confirmed in writing by both sides before the closing statement can be built.

(a) Realistically, how much extra time does a non-standard contract add at file opening?

(b) Does it cost the client anything extra? If not, say so — “no additional charge” is a useful thing for a page to state plainly.

One statute check

Not a placeholder — a conflict. The HOA page cites the same rule twice, to two different subsections.

Where	Citation	Claim
Quick facts, line 23	Fla. Stat. § 718.112(2)(i)	condominium transfer fee capped at $150 per applicant
Body, line 40	Fla. Stat. § 718.112(2)(k)	condominium transfer fee capped at $150 per applicant

At least one is wrong. Deliberately not resolved from memory. Against the current statute text — which subsection, and is $150 still the figure?

Sign-off

Answering the questions is not the same as approving the pages. Once the answers are written in, both pages need your read of the finished text — the byline says a licensed Florida title agent stands behind every word, including the parts nobody flagged.

- ☐ I have answered the questions above.
- ☐ I have read both finished pages in full and they are accurate.
- ☐ Publish both under my byline.

Appendix — why only two pages

Seven of the nine drafts cannot publish no matter what you answer here, because each carries at least one fact only First American or a lawyer can confirm.

Page	Blocked on
mobile-and-remote-signings	First American's RON position; plus which team members hold Florida online notary registrations — that one must come from the Department of State commission record, not from anyone's memory
open-permits-before-closing-florida	FAR/BAR allocation of permit responsibility; First American's coverage position litigation-against-seller-flip-florida	First American's position on pending litigation and recorded lis pendens
buying-property-bankruptcy-estate-florida	Underwriter requirements for a bankruptcy sale order judgment-against-seller-before-closing-florida	Identity-affidavit form First American accepts; plus tenancy by the entireties, which needs a Florida real estate attorney foreign-seller-signing-from-abroad-florida	First American's RON position for out-of-country signers no-legal-access-landlocked-property-florida	Standard access exception language in our commitments; endorsement availability

Those pages also carry 19 Bayit-Title-only placeholders that you can clear whenever you want. Clearing them will not publish the pages, but it removes invented text from anything anyone previews. The full list is in docs/verify-worklist.md.
